Overview

Enjoy a guided 16-kilometer hike through the longest and most impressive of Europe's limestone gorges, a magnificent example of Crete's many gorges, stretching from the White Mountains down to the Libyan sea. You depart early in the morning and passing through several beautiful villages when you reach the plateau of Omalos. Your hike will last approximately 6 hours and will take you, along a breathtaking and constantly changing landscape, to Agia Roumeli, a laid-back coastal village by the South coast, accessible only by boat. The tour will allow you a chance to experience this must-see natural phenomenon at a slower pace, attended to by a specialized guide. At the base of the gorge you can enjoy a refreshing swim and lunch at one of the local tavernas. After an hour's sail to the nearby port, you will be transferred back to Chania in the evening.
